Welcome to the Japan Statistical Society (JSS)

JSS Mission Statements

Statistical Science is a fundamental learning involving all areas of activities concerning both the nature and the human beings. The specialized fields of study of the researchers and the practitioners range from government-related studies to areas such as the humanities, social sciences, economics, management sciences, natural sciences, engineering, medicine, pharmacy, and so on. Statistics has evolved into a highly interdisciplinary science. Moreover, recent years have been witnessing the ever-increasing importance in methodologies for data analyses due to the rapid technological progress and popularization of the computers. The cooperation among computer scientists, practitioners and statisticians and that between the practitioners themselves have never been more important. With such a background, to reflect the versatility of its members, JSS aims at contributing to further development of research and application in areas including the fundamental studies of statistics, all kinds of applications, and statistical education as well. By hosting its scientific meetings through the Japanese Federation of Statistical Science Associations, it also plays a vital role in providing an avenue for communicating with various other disciplines and with other practitioners. For further promoting statistics, a discipline for all sciences, we welcome the warm participation in, cooperation with and support for JSS from all who share an interest in statistics.

JSS Activities

- publishing statistical journals (English and Japanese journals)
- annual (joint) statistical meeting
- varieties of awards (JSS Prize, JSS Activity Prize, JSS Statistics Education Prize, Ogawa Research Prize)
